1. REGISTRATION

What is the municipal register ("padrón")?

Empadronamiento (also called Padrón) is a city hall registration to inform the municipal register where you currently reside.

It is mandatory to register for anyone who plans to live in Spain for more than six months a year. If you live in several different municipalities, or at different addresses within the same municipality, you should register only where you live for the most time each year.

In the case where you are a non-EU national without a permanent residence permit, you should renew your registration every 2 years.

Registration occurs in Valencia's Town Hall (Ayuntamiento), in the Tabacalera Citizen Services Office (Oficina de Atención Ciudadana) or in the Municipal District Council (Junta Municipal de Distrito) that corresponds to your address.

Homes that do not meet basic living standards (shacks, caravans, etc.) can be listed as valid addresses on the register.

Why should I register if I am residing unlawfully?

- The document can prove your continued stay in Spain and you will need it in order to regularize your administrative situation through social integration.
- It enables children under 16 to access to education.
- It is a necessary requirement in order to access to Valencia's Health System.

What do I need to register?

- Photocopy and original of a valid passport or a valid residence card.
- Proof of address:
 1. If you have purchased a house: original or photocopy of the deed of the house.
 2. If you live in rented accommodation: original and copy of the lease or a utility bill (telephone, electricity, water, gas) in your name.
 3. If you live in the home of a friend or relative, you can attend with the person who is the lease or deed holder, or provide the original and a copy of their identity card along with a signed letter that authorizes you to register at their address.

2. DETENTION AND DEPORTATION FOR UNLAWFUL RESIDENCE

If you are arrested by the police for being in Spain without a residence permit, or without having submitted the request of a residence permit, they will take you to the police station and begin legal proceedings against you which may result in a deportation order or a fine.

The maximum detention time at the police station is 72 hours. During that period you can either be released or if not, taken to the Immigration Detention Centre (Centro de Internamiento de Extranjeros CIE).

The police will ask the court that you be sent to a detention centre when you commit an offence with the penalty of deportation.

The maximum time you can be held in the CIE is 60 days. If it has not been possible to carry out your deportation within 60 days, the police have an obligation to set you free.

If in the end you are deported, you are forbidden to enter Spain for a period of time which can vary between 1 and 10 years.

Immigration law specifies the offences for which you can be legally deported.

The most common grounds for deportation:

- Not having requested a residence permit or it having expired more than three months previously and renewal has not been sought.
- Working without a work permit or a residence permit.
- Intentionally concealing from the Public Administration (Police, Government Representation, City Council) changes which affect citizenship status, marital status or address, as well as giving false details when declaring the obligatory information required to be added to the municipal register.
- Non-compliance with judicial measures imposed for reasons of public security: regular reporting to courts or police stations, independently departing from specified limits or population centres.
- Participating in activities contrary to public order considered as serious or very serious under the Organic Law 1/1992 of February 21, concerning the Protection of Public Safety.
- Assisting illegal immigration.
- Hiring other unlawfully residing foreign nationals.
- Profiting from false registration using your address.
- Simulating a false employment relationship.

3. OFFENCES AND PENALTIES

Immigration Law sets out a list of offences that lead to the imposition of administrative sanctions. There are three types of offence: minor, serious and very serious.

Some serious and very serious offences may be grounds for expulsion from Spanish territory.

The penalties can be appealed. The most common and relevant offences are listed below. If you need more information, consult a legal advisory service.

Minor offences: fine of up to €500.	Serious offences: fine of up to €10,000 or deportation.	Very serious offences: fine of up to €100,000 or deportation.
Delay in communicating changes of address, civil status, nationality or changes in your employment circumstances when you are required to do so.	Unlawful residence through not being in possession of a residence permit.	Participation in activities that threaten national security (terrorist attacks or very serious acts) or that can damage relations between Spain and other countries.
Be overdue in applying for renewal of permits (never be more than 3 months overdue).	Be the holder of a residence permit that expired over three months previously and not having applied for its renewal within the corresponding time limit.	Engage in activities contrary to public order (i.e. which disrupt peaceful coexistence between people) that are considered as very serious under Public Safety Law (for more information seek legal advice).
Work with a temporary residence permit but without a work permit. (If you have NO permit it will be a serious offence).	Intentionally conceal changes to nationality, civil status, address.	Participate in and earn money from the trafficking of illegal immigrants.
Work in an occupation, professional sector or geographical area different from that which your work permit allows you.	Falsify the required information when you register. It is motive for deportation.
	Failure to comply with measures imposed for reasons of public security.

3. INFRACCIONES Y SANCIONES

Serious offences: fine of up to €10,000 or deportation.

Register people at your address who do not live there. (You commit one offence for each person you register).

Participate in activities which are contrary to public order.

Marry or become someone's legal representative falsely in order to obtain permits.

Leave Spanish territory for posts you are not authorized for, without showing the required documentation or in cases where you are prohibited from leaving.

Work without a work permit or a residence permit. Working with a residence permit but without a work permit is a minor offence.

The unlawful residence of a foreign national who has come to Spain on the express invitation of another foreign national and who remains in Spain under their charge once the period of time allowed by their visa has elapsed.

Very serious offences: fine of up to €100,000 or deportation.

Engage in discriminatory behavior on racial, ethnic, national or religious grounds.

Make money by falsely registering people at your address who do not live there. (You commit one offence for each person you register.)

Earn money by drawing up false employment contracts with other foreign nationals.

Draw up false employment contracts in order to obtain rights.

Transport to Spanish territory foreign nationals who do not have up-to-date and valid documentation.

Being guilty of a criminal offense punished with a minimum of one year of prison is motive for deportation.

The Supreme Court has established that having criminal records of gender-based violence is motive for deportation.

4. GENDER-BASED VIOLENCE

In the event of gender-based violence, you can go to the City of Justice (Ciudad de la Justicia) and file a complaint in the Court of Violence Against Women ("Juzgado de Violencia sobre la Mujer") or in the Office of Complaint and Support to Victims of Gender-Based Violence ("Oficina de Denuncia y Asistencia a las Víctimas de Violencia de Género"), so they can initiate criminal proceedings for a crime or offence.

Once you have filed the complaint, you and your assailant will testify before the Court within a maximum of three days. If it is proven that you have been victim of violence, the Court will establish an immediate Temporary Protection Order. The same happens in the case where you have children who are at risk.

Can I obtain a residence permit as a victim of gender-based violence?

If you have obtained a residence permit for family reunification that is dependent on that of your assailant, where you are the victim of gender-based violence, you can obtain an independent residence and work permit from the moment a Protection Order is issued. In the event that you are residing unlawfully, you can request a work and residence permit due to exceptional circumstances from the moment a Protection Order is issued in your favour or if the Public Attorney points out there are evidences of an assault.

Once the criminal proceedings are completed, if your assailant is convicted, you will be granted a temporary residence and work permit for five years. Your children who are minors or with a disability will also be issued with a residence permit. The ones who are minors but older than 16, will be issued with a residence and work permit.

If ultimately gender-based violence is not proven to have occurred, the temporary residence and work permit will be denied. If you are in situation of unlawful presence, a procedure for deportation will be opened.

There is a free telephone line for advice on issues related to gender-based violence which provides information 24 hours a day in several languages: 016

You can also call the centre for women in Valencia (CM24): 900 580 888.

5. ACCESS TO EDUCATION

In Spain, education is compulsory and free from the ages of 6 to 16.

Foreign nationals have the right to education under the same conditions as Spanish nationals. This right includes being granted the corresponding academic qualification and access to the public system of scholarships and grants.

The education system is organized into the following stages:

- 0 - 6 years: Infant education.
- 6 - 12 years: Primary education (compulsory).
- 12 - 16 years: Compulsory secondary education (ESO).
- 16 - 18 years: Baccalaureate / Intermediate Vocational Training.
- Higher education: university, higher level vocational training, higher level arts, plastic arts and sports training.

1. If you have children, you should register them in the municipality where you live, look up the school that corresponds to you and go there to apply to enroll.

To find out which centre corresponds to you, you can call the Municipal Education Office of Valencia ("Oficina Municipal de Escolarización"): 96 352 54 78 - Ext: 2119.

3. Foreign nationals who are over eighteen and unlawfully residing are not entitled to higher education.

6. RECOGNITION OF FOREIGN ACADEMIC QUALIFICATIONS

Recognition of foreign qualifications validates in Spain the higher level studies undertaken in a foreign country. It allows you to practice in Spain the profession for which you qualified abroad in conditions comparable to those of the qualifications obtained in the Spanish educational system.

The process of validation and recognition has economic costs and depends on the Ministry of Education and Science.

In the Local Government Office ("Subdelegación del Gobierno") they will be able to provide you with the complete information about the process and the documents you should provide: the necessary documents may vary depending on what you studied, the university that awarded you the qualification and the country where you studied.

Basic requirements for the recognition of qualifications obtained abroad:

- That the studies undertaken and qualifications obtained have official validity in the educational system of the country in which they were done.
- That the qualification attests to studies successfully completed under the country's education system.
- A foreign qualification obtained through recognition by a third party is not acceptable.
- That there is sufficient equivalence with the relevant course or qualification in Spain, both at an academic level and in terms of the duration and content of the course.
- That the person concerned has not previously obtained the same qualification or undertaken the same studies in the Spanish educational system.

The lack of the agreement can be replaced by an Order of the Court.
