

IV EDITION PHOTO CONTEST

“TRANSFORMING SOCIAL REALITIES”

YOUNG PEOPLE: LEADING THE WAY FOR CHANGE

Movement for Peace -MPDL- launches the IV Edition of the Photo Contest "Transforming Social Realities". Since its first edition in 2019, this contest has contributed to making visible the importance of citizen participation, social mobilization and the protagonism of collectives and individuals who, through their principles and actions, transform realities of injustice and inequality in our societies.

This fourth edition, under the subtitle "Young people: leading the way for change", hopes to reflect, through images and stories, the role of young people involved in the collective defence of social rights and the sustainability of life.

Traditionally, children and young people have been denied the possibility of generating proposals in social and political issues. Their critical views of reality and their participation in decision-making processes related to our common future preservation have been ignored. However, with their own momentum, they have shown they want to participate in these debates all over the world, through their own strategies and highlighting different social issues of their interest: feminism, anti-racism, environmental care, LGTBQ+ rights... Their opinions and actions are present in our daily lives, in schools, squares, neighbourhoods, towns and cities... This way, they demand an immediate shaping of tomorrow's world that counts on their voices and their agency.

In the European Year of Youth to be celebrated during 2022, it is more than relevant to recognise these actions carried out by young people in the construction of fairer and more diverse societies. This is why, in this edition, the "Transforming Social Realities" Photo Contest puts the accent on THEM.

PARTICIPANTS

Any person from anywhere, without age limit can participate. Children and young people under the age of 18 should also provide the consent of parents or legal guardians (see section 2.4).

THEME

The IV Edition of "Transforming Social Realities" aims to collect photographs that represent the actions of young people, individually or collectively, that contribute to social change and the defence of social rights.

- The photographs can reflect anything that the author believes contributes to the empowerment of women in society. The image should be accompanied by a short description of why she/he has chosen the photograph and what it represents.
- To guide your participation in the contest you can follow these questions:
- Which young people around you do you think have contributed to change in your neighbourhood, town or city? In what ways do they contribute to the defence of youth rights or, in a broader sense, of social rights that affect society as a whole?
- What forms of citizen participation within the youth movement (demonstrations, assemblies, meetings...) inspire you and do you think they contribute to the promotion of changes in society?
- What kind of acts of collective organisation or mutual support in the defence of social justice led by young people would you like to show?
- What kind of actions (small or large scale) do you think contribute to take more account of the youth voice in political decision-making?
- As a young person (if you are), what would you like to share in relation to your contribution to the construction of a better world?
